Athens & An Aegean Cruise

Plus two night extension option to Rome

Saturday, May 15 – Sunday, May 23, 2010

Whether you're intrigued by Greek mythology or awestruck by the natural, ageless beauty of this Mediterranean region, the ultimate holiday combining Athens and a Greek island cruise strikes the perfect balance. During your four-day cruise, you'll visit Mykonos, the Turkish seaport of Kusadasi (site of the House of the Virgin Mary), Patmos (home to the 900-year-old St. John's Monastery) and Rhodes. On the isle of Crete—where Greek civilization began—you'll visit Heraklion before cruising to nearby Santorini, home to the museum of Akrotiri. Disembarking in Athens, you'll finish off your Greek getaway with a private tour including the ancient ruins of the Acropolis and its fascinating museum followed by a full day on your own in Athens. If you're up for more Mediterranean merriment, though, the fun doesn't have to stop there—opt for the Rome extension, and you'll be whisked off for two nights in one of Europe's most romantic cities, enjoying fine accommodations and the opportunity to roam Rome to your hearts' content.
